Two words for the author of this poll to remember: Dom Manno. Dom was a writer at the school paper back in the 80s when I was at Penn. Dom had the extremely poor judgment to write, after the Reagan assassination attempt, that it was unfortunate that the shooter did not have better aim (or words to that effect). So let's see how a Republican administration treated Mr. Manno. He was immediately investigated including multiple interviews. He left the paper and eventually the University. In an alumni magazine story later on I read that Dom had not been able to land a real job in the 20+ years since he wrote that article. Now I'm not sure Dom's statement merited a lifetime of hounding but it will be interesting to see how this guy gets treted by comparison.

If FB does not track down and prosecute this idiot, I will cancel my account and bid them goodbye. FB should not allow itself to be used by bigots in the name of freedom (without responsibility)

Let me just exercise my 1st Amendment rights here for a minute: Whoever you are who created this poll, listen carefully. This is not funny, if you say you were joking and we should lighten up I don't believe you, threatening the President is seditious behavior for which you should be severely punished, and neither your momma (hopefully) nor Jeebus nor the Secret Service are likely to be proud of you.

You are one EVIL mf.

Where is the line drawn? When does a critical remark become a threat? On one extreme is the off-hand comment, the letter to a friend, the email to a co-worker, or message posted in a newsgroup. On the other, the twisted psychotic plot. Clearly, the circumstances of delivery make a great deal of difference. A "letter to the editor", or speech intelligently attacking the President's every action and policy is our right and should never be construed as a physical threat. Screaming obscenities in the President's face, sending threatening mail to the White House, or publicly stating a desire to see the President harmed are not only acts of shameful disrespect, they should always be considered threats under the law.

This terrible incident makes a very strong case for the Patriot Act in my opinion.

Hp .... please send all the response to this item to the justice dept, so that they will know how the general public feel about this insane survey. Who ever posted the survey on Facebook shold be tried for treason, as so should any one responded 'yes'.

By the way, isn't Facebook owned by Rupert's News Media and Fox?

What about Facebook for allowing a Poll that threatens the President on their Web site in the first place. The thing is that these right wingers will be the every people helped the most be Obama's programs.
